PSYCHOANALYSIS AND POLITICAL ACTIVISM

This workshop will explore what psychoanalysis is and ought to be from an ethical perspective, and what political activism is and might be. In this workshop we will explore how we define social problems given our personal frames of reference, including our histories, conscious and unconscious lives, and ethics. We will focus on our deteriorating health care system and the power of myth and fantasy used in its creation and perpetuation. What is our ethical responsibility as clinicians to advocate for health care for our clients? How can we find ways to have effective public as well as private voices?

Presenter:

Allan Scholom, PhD, is a Clinical Psychologist (Michigan State University) and Psychoanalyst (Chicago Center for Psychoanalysis) in private practice in Chicago. He is on the faculty of the Institute for Clinical Social Work and the Chicago Center for Psychoanalysis. For the past 30 years, Dr. Scholom has been actively involved in health care politics as an educator who has published and presented widely, and as the founder and chair of the Illinois Coalition of Mental Health Professionals and Consumers and vice chair of the Chicago Community Mental Health Board.

MORE TOGETHER, MORE ALONE: PART 2

In last year's highly-rated workshop, More Together, More Alone: Clinical & Cultural Perspectives on the Technological Age, Kate Schechter, PhD, and Bonnie Litowitz, PhD, provided a psychodynamic perspective on the developmental and cultural changes brought about by social networking. The presenters wove together ideas from psychoanalytic theory, anthropology and philosophy to help us understand how new technologies are influencing interpersonal and intrapsychic experience.

Their ideas were so thought provoking, participants wanted to continue the conversation. In Part 2, Dr. Schechter will engage the group in working through a series of complicated clinical situations that raise issues of technique, ethics and values in relation to electronic communication, both between therapist and client, and in the electronic lives of our clients. The workshop will explore the impact of social networking and other technologies on contemporary understandings of self, relationship, and identity from a clinical perspective.

Presenter:

Kate Schechter, PhD, received her doctorate in Anthropology at the University of Chicago, where she also trained as a clinical social worker. She is a psychoanalyst and psychotherapist in private practice in Chicago and is on the faculties of the Institute for Clinical Social Work, the Chicago Institute for Psychoanalysis and Rush University Medical College Department of Psychiatry where she is an Assistant Professor. Kate's research is on postmodern political philosophy and psychoanalysis.

THE ANALYTIC RELATIONSHIP AND THE DIALOGUE OF UNCONSCIOUS: A CLINICAL WORKSHOP

Some clients evoke a range of powerful responses in the therapist – from falling asleep or becoming bored in session to dreaming or worrying about them at night. These experiences are often at the heart of enactments in psychodynamic work and provide special opportunities for understanding the ways in which the unconscious life of patient and analyst emerge, and for ultimately deepening the work. This workshop will explore the nature of the psychodynamic relationship by considering the relationship as “a dialogue of unconscious.” We will try to deepen our grasp of unconscious dimensions of relationships by exploring difficult therapeutic moments using case examples. Participants will have the opportunity to share reactions and clinical process from their own practices with Dr. Bass and within smaller break-out groups.

Presenter:

Anthony Bass, PhD, is on the faculty and is a supervising analyst at the NYU Postdoctoral Program in Psychoanalysis and Psychotherapy and at the Stephen Mitchell Center for Relational Studies. He is also on the faculty of the Columbia University Center for Psychoanalytic Trainings and Research, the Institute for Relational Psychoanalysis of Philadelphia, and the National Institute for the Psychotherapy's National Training Programs. He has written widely and run workshops nationally and internationally on the analytic relationship and the nature of unconscious communication between patient and analyst.
