Marriage plays an important role in the human community that can sustain and enrich our lives. With this in mind, we provide education and counseling to support the commitments which couples have made to create healthy, loving and happy lives together.

Premarital Counseling Services

Premarital counseling services are offered in a couples group and individual couple sessions. A three session format is provided with an option for the first session in a group setting.

Group sessions are scheduled periodically throughout the year. Individual couple sessions are available Monday through Saturday and scheduled with staff therapists.

Educational and research materials are used to enrich the couple’s experience. Additional counseling is available if the couple wishes to explore issues in more depth.

Sessions

Session One
The History of Our Relationship
This session explores how the couple met and how they are experiencing the challenges of preparing for marriage. We consider some of the myths about marriage and introduce some recent findings from couples research.

Session Two
Considering Our Families of Origin
This session focuses on the use of genograms to provide a visual diagram of each person’s family of origin. This experience offers the couple an opportunity to explore the effects their families have had on them and could have on their future together.

Session Three
Our Vision for the Future Together
This session considers the strengths and challenges the couple has identified with a focus on enhancing resilience and building for the future.
